Helping The Aged

Old age is becoming America's No. 1 social problem. In another ten or more years, 14,000,000 citizens—almost a tenth of the population—will be in the over-65 age bracket. Experts say this situation calls for social and industrial reorientation, since oldsters, to be happy, need to feel useful and wanted.

Not only the geriatricians, but far-sighted religious leaders are trying to arouse greater ininterest in the problems aging persons are bound to face. At the same time, they are discussing practical ways in which these people may be helped in overcoming the worries and trials which too often make old age a time of unnecessary tragedy and

Addressing the recent annual meeting of the Lutheran Welfare Conference in America, the Rev. Francis A. Shearer, of New York, declared that the churches have a particular responsibility for helping to make old people's homes of the future safer and happier places to live in. Especially, he said, since with the pressure of increasing population and changes in the nation's home life, more old people will be applying for admission to churchconducted institutions for the aged.

Meanwhile, according to Mr. Shearer, there is much to be done both in helping to dispel the widespread notion that a worker should retire at 60 or 65 and in expanding the recreational and social opportunities available to oldsters.

He suggested that among activities which old persons should be encouraged to join are hobby clubs, rhythm bands, camps and dramaticsanything that will add new zest and stimulation to their lives.

Mr. Shearer might have stressed another point: that old people are as much in need of companionship, kindness, and affection as they ever were. Here lies a great opportunity for younger folk to bring a personal measure of happiness and content to those whose work is done, but who are entitled to some recognition and recompense for all their active, busy years.

The Sedalia Chiefs opened the second half of their Central Missouri Ban Johnson league season with a tight 3 to 2 victory over Mexico, Mo., Thursday night at Sedalia scored all three runs in the seventh inning on three hits. Barbour opened with an infield hit, Vilmer walked, and then J. Waters hit a triple, the longest blow of the game, to score the two runners. Dillard then blasted a double that scored Waters for the winning Sedalia tally. The rally shattered a no-hitter which March, the Mexico hurler, had going into that inning.

Pepper Drama Permits Escape Of Peter Pepock

7—(P)—Peter Pepock pitched paw of pepper in Aaron Preston's peepers.

The characters in this little drama were Pepock, whose mother-in-law had sworn out a warrant charging him with disturbing the peace, and Preston, a deputy constable.

Preston went out to pick up Pepock at Lee's Summit, Mo., searched him and started back to Independence. As the two drove into the city, Pepock threw some pepper in to Preston's eyes. The car went wild, the prisoner jumped out one door, the constable the other.

Pepock escaped while Preston was trying to clear his eyes. Maydin M. Chiles, the chief constable, said Pepock probably had the pepper loose in his coat pocket.

Helping The Aged

Old age is becoming America's No. 1 social problem. In another ten or more years, 14,000,000 citizens—almost a tenth of the population—will be in the over-65 age bracket. Experts say this situation calls for social and industrial reorientation, since oldsters, to be happy, need to feel useful and wanted.

Not only the geriatricians, but far-sighted religious leaders are trying to arouse greater ininterest in the problems aging persons are bound to face. At the same time, they are discussing practical ways in which these people may be helped in overcoming the worries and trials which too often make old age a time of unnecessary tragedy and heartache.

Addressing the recent annual meeting of the Lutheran Welfare Conference in America, the Rev. Francis A. Shearer, of New York, declared that the churches have a particular responsiblity for helping to make old people's homes of the future safer and happier places to live in. Especially, he said, since with the pressure of increasing population and changes in the nation's home life, more old people will be applying for admission to churchconducted institutions for the aged.

Meanwhile, according to Mr. Shearer, there is much to be done both in helping to dispel the widespread notion that a worker should retire at 60 or 65 and in expanding the recreational and social opportunities available to oldsters.

He suggested that among activities which old persons should be encouraged to join are hobby clubs, rhythm bands, camps and dramaticsanything that will add new zest and stimulation to their lives.

Mr. Shearer might have stressed another point: that old people are as much in need of companionship, kindness, and affection as they ever were. Here lies a great opportunity for younger folk to bring a personal measure of happiness and content to those whose work is done, but who are entitled to some recognition and recompense for all their active, busy years.

THE STORY: Mike McTatg, a mining engineer, is working for beautiful, high-spirited Cory Par-nell, in spite of Mike's ideas about nell, in spite of Mike's ideas about women and mine operations. Mike believes Cory's mine, the Dark Angel, is playing out, but he takes anmples and ships them to San Francisco for a secret assay. However, one of the lots, he finds, was tampered with. And when the figures are returned he finds that the untampered lot shows a much higher figure than the other—approximately $16 per ton, compared with $5 a ton. Mike tells Cory what he has formed and that somehody had tampered with the lot that showed only a $5 per ton assay.

Police Court Month of June

Three hundred fifty-eight misdemeanor fines, totalling $1,441.50, were paid in Judge Harry O. Berry's police court during the month of June. Out of the 358 cases, 210 were for overtime parking Thirty-six of the total persons who appeared in police court during the month of June were arrested for speed ing, all of whom paid or forfeited fine of $10 with the exception of Frank Wagner, who has appealed a charge of speeding to the circuit court.

Since June 22, when auto-stickers became delinquent, only one violator was fined $250 for not laving a city sticker attached to s automobile.

To eliminate speeding in Sedalia seems to be the biggest campaign waged by the police at the present time, and very often motorists are taken by surprise when being picked up for speeding, after being clocked by police officers who operate what is known as a "speed trap." Many of the peeders picked up have indicated that it was a good thing for Sedalia to eliminate speeding, and have paid their fines without complaining. Still others have complained and have asserted that it was "a racket" being operated by the police. For Public Safety

Chief of Police Edgar Neighbors has seriously stated time and time again that it isn't the money that the police department cares about, ut the safety of the public.

Other persons appearing in court were charged with vagrancy, running stop signs, intoxication, reless and reckless driving, disurbing the peace, illegal parking, making left hand turns, blocking the sidewalks, blocking traffic,
